Historical Notes

George Richard Heusinkveld was born in Hull, Iowa on May 31, 1917. His parents, Dick (Derk) and Ella DeBoer Heusinkveld, were charter members of the American Reformed Church of Hull, where George was baptized. He graduated from Hull Public High School in 1934; Northwestern Junior College, Orange City in 1936; Central College, Pella in 1938, and, in 1939, from the University of Iowa, Iowa City, where he earned a master's degree in journalism.

During World War II, Heusinkveld served in the U.S. Naval Reserve. In 1944 he married Emma Lou Becker in San Diego, California. George and Emma had three daughters: Paula, Myra, and Ginger.

As a journalist, Heusinkveld worked for newspapers in Oklahoma and Iowa, most notably as the farm and area editor for the Oskaloosa Daily Herald, Oskaloosa (1954-1964). Between 1964 and his retirement in 1972 (due to declining health from a brain tumor), he was a social worker for Marion County, Iowa, a director of Camp Sunnyside, Des Moines, and a salesperson for the American Automobile Association (AAA). He died in Des Moines at the V.A. Medical Center on May 26, 1981, a few days short of his sixty-fourth birthday. Funeral services were held at the Second Reformed Church, Pella, and he was buried in Pella's Oakwood Cemetery.
